

When we burn fossil fuels like coal and gas, we pump carbon dioxide (CO₂) into the atmosphere.

As carbon dioxide (CO₂) builds up, it creates a blanket around Earth.

This thick blanket around Earth traps heat.

Trapped heat warms up our oceans.

